

International Conference on
Population and Development in Asia: Critical Issues for a Sustainable Future
20 – 22 March 2006, Phuket, Thailand

Panel on

Migration, Development and Difference

Panel Organizer: Sara R. CURRAN
Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies, University of Washington, USA

Overview

In this session, the authors examine how differences among migrants and between migrants and non-migrants influence their selective adaptation, strategic engagement, and opportunities for success in destination communities. The authors offer insights on their research questions using a variety of data from a variety of settings offering new insights for scholars of migration.
